

Casement Windows

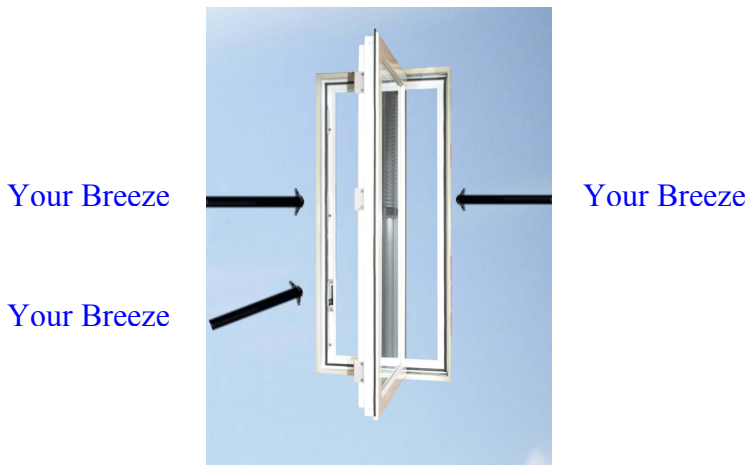

Cross Ventilation With Double Glazing Advantages

Maximum cross flow ventilation in hot climates and double glazing performance. Is it really possible?

From Sovereign Windows the answer is a resounding Yes

Did you realise that with a 90 degree opening Casement, over 90% of the surface of the opening is available for directing air flow into your home.

Up to three directions of air flow are covered, no other window can match it.

Maximising the window size in Casements allows our customers to obtain that much valued cross breeze. All while enjoying an unobstructed view & helping to reduce your energy requirements

WERS Certified Performance

Double sealed all round for high performance which is a natural for Sovereign Windows.

Cleaning the glass is a breeze with 90 degree opening sash - you'll never have to go outside to clean your windows again.

Double Glazing (Insulated glass units) WERS 6 star energy rated Casement windows, utilising Architectural pultruded fibreglass.

The alternative to Timber, Aluminium , Aluminium thermally broken or uPVC .

Why Casement windows ?

It's simple:

Utilising the latest technology in window material Casement windows to 1800mm in height and 750mm wide (they can be coupled together for much wider openings) at a lower cost than the traditional Louvre window are now available from Sovereign Windows & Doors.

Available in double glazing our customers can now take advantage of sophisticated glass combinations for that unique "glass on glass" experience.

Higher performing Windows mean ongoing energy savings. With Double Glazing a reduction in air conditioning costs of up to 20% is achievable - hundreds of dollars per year in fact - even more if you specify Argon gas fill for a total of 35% reduction of heat gain or loss. A feature not available with Louvre windows.

Installing Sovereign Casements may mean you do not need air conditioning at all.

Ongoing comfort while saving on your energy costs could mean that in just a few years you have paid for your windows, all while enjoying the unsurpassed luxury of Casement window performance. Double Glazing is not just for cold climates.

Here in Australia Sovereign Windows are just as effective at keeping heat out as keeping it in.
